NEW BOMBARDMENT OF NARVIK BY THE BRITISH REVEALED

German War Communique Claims Further Nazi Advances

DAMAGE UNCONFIRMED

British Have Not Attempted Landings, Despite The Bombardments

By International News Service

BERLIN, Apr. 25.—A new bombardment of the port and city of Narvik by two British battleships and several cruisers and destroyers was revealed in the German war communique today, which claimed further Nazi advances north of Steinkjer. Considerable damage also done by British shells hurtling into Narvik military headquarters occupied by the German defenses, was not confirmed.

Despite the repeated bombardments during the last few days, the British have not attempted any landings at Narvik, it was asserted.

BERLIN, Apr. 25.—Aerial warfare, long-feared by Europe, drew a step closer today with a sharp warning that Germany will retaliate the alleged British bombing of an open town in Schleswig-Holstein.

"England has opened aerial warfare against undefended places that have no military value or significance," a communique by the German high command asserted.

Military spokesmen declared that during recent British raids, bombs were dropped on the towns of Weningstedt and Heide. This the British denied.

Demand Precautions Against Recurrence of Fire Disaster

NATCHEZ, Miss., Apr. 25.—(INS)—Natchez citizens today demanded precautions against recurrence of such a disaster as a revised count of bodies taken from the Rhythm night club fire placed the death toll at approximately 200 Negroes.

The Negroes, attending a dance, were burned and suffocated to death Tuesday night when a lightning-fast fire engulfed the one-story frame structure, with only one exit and the windows boarded up, in which they were celebrating.

Previous counts had given somewhat higher death tolls, but it was explained there had been some duplications. The latest count of bodies gave 198 dead, all Negroes. Many were still unidentified. Most of them were from Natchez, Ferriday, La., or Lafayette, Miss.

Nine members of the Walter Barnes Negro Orchestra, from Chicago, were among the dead. These included the band leader, of Chicago; James Coles and John Reed, of Huntington, W. Va.; Harry Walker, Cincinnati; Paul Scott, Indianapolis; Calvin Roberts, Gary, Ind.; Clarence Porter, Ft. Myers, Fla.; Jesse Washington, Vicksburg, Miss.; and Juanita Avery, singer, of Dallas, Tex.

The fire was believed to have started when a lighted match was tossed into the dance hall decorations. No inquest was planned.

Additional German Units Departing For Norway

PARIS, Apr. 25.—(INS)—While the entire French press warned that a "Swedish crisis is near," a spokesman for the War Ministry announced today that additional German military units have departed from Reich Baltic ports for Norway.

"Sweden lies along the route," the spokesman added ominously, recalling previous French contentions that the Germans might try to enter Norway through Swedish territory.

(Editor's note: Sweden has refused to agree to passage of Reich forces across its territory.)

The Paris newspapers Populaire and Petit Parisien reported that several Nazi divisions from East Prussia embarked from Memel, and Genevieve Taboris, well-known French commentator, stated five German divisions had been concentrated at Rostock, Warnemunde, Stettin, Koenigsberg and Memel.

The war office spokesman estimated Germany has a maximum of four divisions in Norway, but said these are being reinforced daily.

OVER 300 AT OPENING OF ANTIQUE SHOW

Largest Attendance On The Opening Day of Any Antique Exhibit

CAME FROM 9 STATES

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 25.—The largest opening-day attendance in the history of the well-known Bucks County Antiques Show was recorded yesterday when over 300 men and women from nine different States visited the seventh annual exposition in the States Banquet Hall, Doylestown.

The show was previously held at the Doylestown Country Club, but the new location is considered by exhibitors and patrons as far more desirable.

People of prominence in art walks of life, celebrities from the art colony, writers, publishers, business and professional men were among the first-day visitors at the show which will continue until Saturday night daily from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

This year's show is by far the finest exhibition of real antiques that has ever been shown in Doylestown, in the opinion of yesterday's patrons and buyers.

"I consider the Bucks County Antiques Show one of the very finest in the country," declared Frank M. Weaver, of Lansdale, one of the outstanding dealers in the State. "I deem it a privilege to be invited to Doylestown to show, and I know that people feel that when they come to Doylestown's show to buy they will receive authentic pieces and fair dealing, which cannot be said of all shows. I have exhibited at many antique shows in various parts of the country and I'll place Doylestown in No. 1 position for many reasons, and that goes for buyer and dealer."

The Bucks County 1940 show offers an extensive and varied collection of everything worthwhile that is old. There are a number of new-comes among the 13 exhibitors this year, but all are well known.

Among the outstanding authorities on antiques in this country are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shaw Newman, proprietors of "The Old Print Shop," 165th and Lexington avenue, New York City, who visited the show here yesterday. J. Wharton Sinkler, Southampton, and Mrs. Ralph Beaver Strassberger, of Gwynedd Valley, were also visitors and buyers yesterday.

As to the exhibits there are many fine pieces in attractively arranged display spaces. J. Fabian Cooper, of Trenton, N. J., and Tullytown, Bucks county, is showing a very fine early Jersey walnut linen closet and another walnut Sheraton chest. The Cooper exhibit also includes a portrait of Henry Clay by John Neagle and another of Daniel Webster by Chester Harding. This display also has the usual fine pieces of crystal and Staffordshire figures and vases, and an unusually fine pair of Hurricane globes.

The MacReynolds' Old Print Shop, one of the most attractively arranged exhibits of the show, includes a varied collection of old prints of every description, old valentines, needlework pictures and thousands of ancient decorative maps, America and the whole world, 16th, 17th and 18th centuries. All this is in addition to a carefully chosen collection of antiques of fine quality, including lustre, much early silver, clear and colored glass, copper and pewter, china and furniture. With the approach of the month of June, much old silver is being collected for wedding.

The Provincial Antique Shop of Lahaska is showing a very unusual and attractive Russian samovar in brass and an old pine pewter cupboard in its original state, one of the outstanding show pieces.

Daylight Saving Time

Harrisburg, April 25.—(INS)—One hundred eighty communities, grouped largely around Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, will observe daylight saving time in Pennsylvania for five months beginning Sunday, the State Chamber of Commerce announced today.

Clocks will be advanced one hour at 2 a. m. April 28, in those communities which plan to operate on daylight time. They represent approximately 64 per cent of the State's urban population.

Williamsport's voters rejected daylight saving in a post-card poll, and many elements, including miners, opposed it in the anthracite region.

Although Pottsville moved to adopt "fast time," theatres and other establishments there planned to remain on standard time.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

"The Politician's Dream"

Washington, April 24. AS the national conventions approach there probably will be even more talk than now about the necessity of having in the White House for the next four years a President competent to handle our foreign affairs.

One of the chief arguments of the third termers is that no one can do this, except Mr. Roosevelt.

IN that connection the case of Mr. Jimmie Cromwell, our elegant Minister to Canada, is worth reviewing. The review is made timely by the announcement of this great diplomat that he will resign in a few days in order to enter the Democratic primaries in New Jersey as a candidate for the United States Senate. Thus, the Cromwell entrance and exit from our diplomatic service establishes a record. No similar incident has occurred in our history. Whoever succeeds Mr. Roosevelt, it hardly will be repeated.

THE facts speak for themselves. Without experience, or any other even suggested qualification other than that he is the husband of one of the richest women in the world, contributed liberally to the 1936 campaign fund and is nationally known as a "playboy," Mr. Roosevelt named Mr. Cromwell to this important post early in January. Before the appointment, it had been widely published that Mr. Frank Hague, unsavory boss of New Jersey, intended to nominate Mr. Cromwell for Senator this fall and the Canadian appointment was considered desirable as a campaign "build-up." No one, of course, contends that Mr. Roosevelt was not fully aware of this.

DRIVE ON TO RID TOWN OF UNSIGHTLY SPOTS

Borough Authorities To Enforce Ordinance Against Dumping of Trash

RECEIVE COMPLAINTS

Unsightly spots about town due to the promiscuous dumping of ashes, trash and general debris is coming in for a lot of criticism and some of this criticism was lodged with borough council, Monday night, with the result that that body is taking action to rid the community of these unsightly spots.

After a discussion of the general untidiness of Bristol, which in spots is littered with loose paper; and the habit of dumping ashes and empty cans and other debris in locations where it is attracting so much unfavorable attention, the borough authorities reached a decision to put a stop to the practice.

The authorities, however, ask the co-operation of the public and tomorrow the borough ordinance "regulating the collection of ashes and rubbish and providing penalties for violations," will be published in full in the Courier.

One of the Borough approved dumping grounds has about been filled, and another has been opened. From this approved borough dumping ground, during the past few days, when high winds prevailed, the men who are in charge, could not with safety burn the paper. Some of this loose paper blew over the adjacent area, but as soon as weather conditions improved the borough employees cleaned the area.

It was also discovered that the authorized ash collector was using a dumping ground which had not been approved by the borough. This has been called to his attention and it is to be made presentable, and if the dumping of the ashes and rubbish collected in the borough is to be continued on this spot, it will be done under conditions which will not be objectionable.

The public is asked to co-operate by securely tying all loose paper so that it will not blow about the streets. Then the public is informed that ashes and debris set out for the authorized collector must be placed where it is accessible for him.

In quoting from the borough ordinance: Section 4. The said ashes and rubbish shall be collected under the following regulations, terms and conditions:

The collector shall assume full responsibility for the removal and disposition of all ashes and rubbish in the Borough when placed in proper containers as hereinafter provided, on the sidewalks near the curb, or at the rear of properties on "through-alley driveways," once each week on such days as the collector may designate.

The ridding of the community of these unsightly spots will be a decided improvement, and will have the full co-operation of many residents. It is the opinion of many that now is the time to stop the careless dumping of debris just wherever there may be a convenient spot. It gives a very unsightly appearance to the community, the loose material blows about and litters adjacent property.

The street committee of council today authorized the publication of the borough ordinance regulating the collection of ashes and rubbish and a rigid enforcement of its provisions is to start at once, it is stated.

It has been brought to the attention of the Street and Highway Committee under whose supervision the collection of ashes is placed, that in some instances where complaints are filed that the fault lies with the resident. The ordinance specifies that the ashes and debris must be placed in proper containers on the sidewalks near the curb, or at the rear of properties on "through-alley driveways" once each week.

ARREST BRISTOL, PHILA. YOUTHS AS HOLD-UP SUSPECTS

Joseph Saranzak Arrested In St. Clair; Attempted To Siphon Gas

R. HEISS IN CUSTODY

Is Questioned in Connection With Hold-Ups in Fogelsville and Collegeville

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 25.—Joseph Saranzak, 20, of the 300 block of Dorrance street, Bristol, and Robert Heiss, 21, of the 1900 block of Harrison street, Frankford, today were held without bail for a further hearing next Tuesday as suspects in a series of robberies in Philadelphia and the surrounding communities.

Saranzak was arrested early Tuesday morning in St. Clair, near Pottsville, by state police, a few hours after, according to Sergeant Harold Piersoll, of the Pottsville State Police sub-station, he and Heiss held up and robbed John Piechowski, of Philadelphia, at James and Margaret streets in this city.

The two men were charged with taking the car of Stanley Marska, of Philadelphia, which Piechowski was driving, robbing the latter of $4, and taking his trousers so he could not call police.

Pottsville state troopers were called into the case when Saranzak and Heiss headed for the anthracite region, where Saranzak formerly lived, ran out of gasoline, and police said attempted to siphon gasoline from automobiles parked in St. Clair.

Heiss escaped, but was arrested by Philadelphia detectives in his Frankford rooming house later the same day.

Meanwhile, Saranzak was returned to Philadelphia by city detectives who were summoned to Pottsville by state troopers.

In addition to the hold up of Piechowski, the two are being questioned, Philadelphia authorities said, in connection with hold ups in Fogelsville and Collegeville on April 11th.

ESCAPE FROM IT ALL

There are those who tire betimes
of the workaday world and harbor
the desire to "get away from it all."
This type will find no solace in the experience of the small party of Californians who decided to abandon their proud state and lead an
"ideal existence" on East Caicos Island in the British West Indies. A dispatch from Florida discloses that nine of the original nineteen have quit the reputed paradise.

E. A. Lawrence, a former San Francisco salesman, on reaching Miami in a motorship that brought him from the island, a little more than a month after he forsook civilization, is said to have leaned across
the ship's rail and kissed the dock.
So glad was he to be back in the U. S. A. Later he danced a jig.
"I'll never go back," Mrs. Lawrence said. The couple asserted that the leader of the group and his family
also had deserted the island, which the Lawrences said was overrun with jackasses. The health of the millennium seekers was imperiled
by mosquito bites, infections and ex-posure to the sun, the couple asserted.

Disparaging remarks are heard
now and then of modern civilization
and the ills that it has brought upon the world. The inference is that the simple, pastoral and even primitive life is preferable. But a person accustomed to the untold benefits of civilization could hardly enjoy primitive life. He would miss modern medicine and dentistry, and a sharp toothache or an ulcer of the eyelid would send him rushing back to civilization.

Some would like the simple life
with its lack of rush and fuss and care, but would combine with it the benefits of science and the arts.
They wish to enjoy the fruits of civilization but to avoid the annoyance of contributing to it.

But when all is considered, few people would like the simple life
anyway; those who think that they would probably put too much credence in the suggestion of their fantasy.

KEYNOTER

Undoubtedly, for the publicity assured and as strategy serving substantial political ends besides, the Republican planners acted smartly
in choosing Minnesota's young Governor, Harold E. Stassen, for temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention. He is only 33 years old. At this time of Republican revival, before the convention naming the Republican candidate for President, a spokesman of Republican youth will deliver the speech striking the "keynote" of the Presidential campaign.

Stassen rose to the governorship
of his large state while in his early thirties. That remarkable rise and his success in the office have made him an outstanding Republican figure. He may speak for all Republican youth and also, quite especially for the Western agricultural state which are counted as essentials in GOP election calculations.

Stassen's rise to be credited as a smart choice for still another reason.
He is too young to become the nominee himself, no matter how arousing his speech may be. In making this selection, the convention's arrangements committee patently had in mind the Constitution's flat edict that no person shall be eligible for President "who shall not have attained to the age of 35 years."

FOUNDATION IS VERY IMPORTANT FOR THE WARDROBE OF SPRING

By Miss Edna Stephany (Home Economics Representative)

The carriage and grace which make the appearance of a woman a success or failure can be achieved through good posture and a properly fitted foundation garment. Only the very young or the sylph-like figure can appear without curves and bulges
smoothed into a graceful contour.

In planning your spring wardrobe
do not put selection and purchase of a new foundation garment at the bottom of your list to be added only in case you have enough money left after your outer garments are selected. A well-known foundation garment designer of today says, "An inexpensive
little dress will look very chic over a good foundation garment, but a very expensive dress will be ruined by a poor fitting foundation garment or none at all."

The well-dressed woman of today in the home or in business does not wait until her foundation garment is shape-less and out-of-date to the point of embarrassment before she goes to select another. Fortunately the waspwaist girdle introduced last year was short-lived in America. For Spring we have a new elongated waist line which is ideally suited to the American woman's figure.

Cherries Ripe and Cherries Red

By Frances Lee Barton

HAVE you any of this year's sour cherries available? If not, do you have a can or two left over from last season? If the answer is still "No!", I suggest you purchase some and try
the following recipe for a desert that will surprise and delight those to whom it is served. Easy to make,
economical and delicious — a real
"three-in-one" tasty.

Currant Ruby Molds

1/2 cup dried currants; 1 cup red cherry juice (from canned sour cherries); 1 cup hot water; 1
package strawberry-flavored gelatin;
1/2 teaspoon salt; 2 tablespoons sugar.
Add currants to cherry juice and cook slowly 10 minutes. Add hot water to make 1 pint liquid. Dissolve gelatin in hot liquid. Add salt and sugar. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold.
Serves 4 to 6.

fitting by a skilled corsetiere, who will make sure you have the right type of garment for your figure. Buying a girdle over the counter is not only old-fashioned but is generally money
thrown away and just another garment in your dresser drawer. The newest feature is figure control with strong,
lightweight materials, expertly cut,
rather than heavy boning and extra
reinforcements which annoy the body.
Fabrics of special weave, double-power
net elastic, sections of elastic at the right places, add to the fit of the garment.

The zipper is the most popular fastening. All zipper closings should be reinforced underneath with a hooked
section or tabs, and padding to protect the wearer.

Garters should be adjusted to the hose length. Select fastenings as flat as possible. The kind that fold over and can be adjusted with one hand
save both your hose and your disposition.

Detachable shoulder straps are most satisfactory as they can be laundered or replaced frequently. An elastic inset will prevent the straps from slipping off the shoulder. All elastic stays wear out more quickly than cloth ones
and frequently cut the flesh.

Longer wear will result if you can have two garments so you can alternate them—one for general wear, and perhaps one for work.

Your garment should be washed at least once or twice a week, as it is close to your skin and absorbs much perspiration. Hand laundering is most successful, and increases the life of the garment. Use a mild lukewarm suds and lift the garment up and down.
Use a soft bristle brush or a terry
face cloth on soiled spots. Never soak, rub or wring. Rinse it at least three times. Roll in an absorbent towel to remove as much water as possible and then spread on a towel to dry, first loosening the garter clips to prevent rusting and to hasten drying of the elastic. Pressing is unnecessary, but if you do it, use only a warm iron and never iron the elastic.

itors with relatives here.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

As Gaby fitted her key into the lock of the door, she felt a tremor of foreboding. When she entered the small room she saw immediately it was unoccupied. More than unoccupied, it was partially uninhabited,
for Peter's beloved books were gone
from their accustomed place.

As if in a dream she entered the small place. A cursory glance failed to divulge anything more, so she went into the kitchenette. It was also bare of any further evidence of Peter having taken leave.

It was in the dressing room, propped against a sapphire stop-
pered rock crystal perfume bottle,
that she found his note. She read it,
the tears streaming down her face
unheeded.

Gabrielle:
I've just had a wire from my cousin in New York wanting me to come at once. He wired
I should go. After last night,
and because of the other night,
there doesn't seem to be any reason for not going. If you care to, you may join me later.
I will send you my address as soon as I'm located. PETER.

The minutes slipped by and still she stood there immobile. The tears
had stopped, and there was no sound
in the apartment except her labored
breathing.

Abruptly, she noticed there was no tick of the familiar old alarm clock. She had placed a small, bunjo type electric clock on the wall in the other room, and had relegated the bright green alarm clock to the dressing room. Now it was gone,
and somehow she felt sad about it.

She had never cared for the shabby, second-hand books; she had openly resented the presence of the too green alarm clock; but she had never realized until now how decorative the tall, black haired
Peter had been to the small place.

All at once, she opened the door of the closet. Yes, her head nodded solemnly, certainly, he was unconditionally gone. His one good suit and the two extra pairs of pants were not there. She opened the lower drawer of the dresser. It was as though she sought proof that he was really gone.

Rising from her position she suddenly seemed to feel alive once more.
The numbness was gone, as were
Peter's shirts and underwear.
Straightening her figure, Gabrielle
took a deep breath and, with a sob,
turned, and hurried out of the apartment.

Running down the stairs she thought abstractedly that something
would have to be done with the furnishings. The bills, too, would have to be taken care of. The lovely new refrigerator would have to be sold.
She joined her father, a grim set expression on her face.

"He's left, Daddy. He couldn't wait, I guess. There was a note saying I'd hear soon."

"That's a peculiar way to act,"
her father said, with obvious reluctance. "Seems as though he might have waited until you got home, Gaby."

Gabrielle drove on without saying anything. Her chin was up, her eyes looked straight ahead as though driving through the almost deserted street was difficult. Her slim brown hands clinched the steering wheel until the knuckles showed white.

Upon reaching home, Sam spoke
quietly, almost expressionlessly:
"Better put your car in the north garage, Gaby. Jake has the garden tools in the south one now."

She obediently drew up before the north garage, stopped, and waited while Sam got heavily out of the car and opened the door for her.

The car put away, they walked silently around to the front veran-

da, and went into the long, cool hall.
"Hello, darlings!" called her mother from the dusky interior of the living room.

They went in, Gabrielle taking the first chair as though she could go
no farther; Sam going over to Helen, and kissing her lightly. He said:

"Going up and shower, Helen, if there's time before dinner."
"There will be," replied his wife,
looking at Gabrielle's slumped figure
with a slow frown. "Hurry dear—I I'll have Violet hold dinner for half an hour."

"You'd better shower off, too, Gaby," Sam said kindly as he passed by her. "Those dusty roads out at the fields make a person feel filthy!"
When his heavy steps had died
away in the upper part of the house,
Helen asked in a low voice:

"What's wrong, Gabrielle?"
Gabrielle shut her eyes tightly, as though to free herself from some unhappy sight.

"Peter's left me, Mummy," she said, burying her face in her hands.
She hadn't called her mother the affectionate little name used in her childhood days for years, and Helen Snow's features contracted suddenly. Getting up she came over to the chair where Gabrielle made a small,
bunched-up heap.

"Tell Mummy about it, dear," she said, putting her arms around the slender form. Gabrielle turned with a gulp and buried her face against her mother's breast. Helen took off
the small hat and pushed the soft,
flaxen curls away from her daughter's hot forehead.

Slowly the words tumbled out
and, although they were related in a disconnected manner, Mrs. Snow
soon had the picture firmly in mind.
"But, Mummy—I love him!
What'll I do?"

Gabrielle was more broken up than Helen had ever seen her. More than the time when her beloved rug
doll had spilled its insides all over everything. Then she hadn't been able to understand that it could be fixed; now, she seemed to think there was no fixing her marriage.

"He'll write, dear, and you can go to him—if that's what you want to do. Anyway, Gabrielle, won't you go up now and shower and dress?
There are several of your old dresses and there's lingerie in your room. Violet did up that sweet pink organdie just the other day. Put that on, dear."

Gabrielle sighed. Sometimes, she thought, it seemed that no one ever took her marriage to Peter with the seriousness it deserved. She rose to go upstairs, feeling that her life was utterly ruined.

"I'm happy to have you home
again, darling," said Helen softly.

The following days were unpleasant for them all. Gabrielle ate practically nothing, did practically nothing, and said practically nothing. And at night, when she was alone in her old room, the daffodil yellow room
which had been decorated at her exact design, she didn't cry very much, as Sam and Helen surmised
she did.

Gabrielle had hardly known what she felt herself, the night when she knew Peter was gone. At first she had felt that only being with Peter mattered; but upon cold analysis
she decided that she had better face
the truth, admit she had made a mistake, take up her life where it had been before her marriage.

And then, too, there had been no word from Peter. It did seem he could write, thought Gabrielle, when almost a week had gone by.

Her parents made no mention of Peter, treating her as though she had never left their roof, as though she were still the thoughtless, fun
loving girl she had been only a few short weeks before. Sometimes Gabrielle was thankful for this, other times she felt she would scream with nerves if Peter didn't write soon.

Exactly one week after he had left Teumetalla, Gabrielle read in the paper that Dorothy and Tony were expected home from Bermuda in a few days. She wondered how their marriage had turned out. Of course, they had money, or rather,
their parents had. Then, too, they had always been expected to marry
each other.

When the mailman came Helen was shopping and Violet was busy in the kitchen. Gabrielle brought Peter's letter in with a lot of other mail and, when she saw it, her heart stood still. Now, she thought, everything would be all right.

Laying the other letters on the table in the hall, she took Peter's letter and hurried up to her room.
There was no one about, but she felt
she wanted to be off by herself.

When she had finished reading it,
she read it again, her expression becoming set and angry looking. Said
the letter:

Gabrielle:
I suppose by now you know I
paid the bills, gave the landlady
a week's pay, and took everything of mine out of the apartment. I hope things weren't too hard for you otherwise.

I have a job with the Blue-
Gay Boys as pianist and soloist.
I'm very fortunate, but, of course, my cousin cinched it for me. I will send you money to come here if you want to come.
I'll pay for a divorce if that's what you want.

You will have to figure these things out for yourself because I have all I can manage just
now. Sorry I couldn't tell you goodbye but I had to be here at a certain time, and so had to leave when I did.

Good luck, PETER.

There followed his address and that was all.

Stunned by the finality of the words, Gabrielle sat looking out the window through the flamboyantly
flowering window box. A robin lit
on its edge, chirped questioningly,
cocked its head on one side and eyed
the still figure of the girl inquisi-
tively out of one tiny, brilliant orb.

A car came into the drive at the south side of the house and she knew without giving any thought to it that her father was home for lunch. She rose quietly, brushed her light hair back plainly from her babyish, rounded forehead, ran a powder puff over her face, and left the room.

After luncheon, of which she ate
only enough to keep her parents
from remarking about it, Gabrielle
said quietly:

"Will you two come into the living room a moment? I want to talk with you, please."

"Of course, Gaby," said Sam,
looking at her oddly. "A family conference never did anyone any harm."

In the restful seats of the living room chairs they all sat stiff and uncomfortable, waiting. Gabrielle finally began:

"I've heard from Peter, and he doesn't sound as though he'd care
to have me join him. You may read the letter if you care to."

She took it from the pocket of her sport skirt, and handed it to her mother. Her father rose and took a seat by his wife on the divan. After a moment, he looked up expectantly.
So did her mother, and Gabrielle
could see she was angry.

"He should be ashamed of himself!" Helen cried wrathfully.

"Please, Mother, let's not talk about him," said Gabrielle in a low, pleading tone. "Let's not discuss him ever! What I wanted to say was that I'd like a divorce—then just forget it all!"

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

"I should say you should get a divorce!" exclaimed Helen.

"If you're sure that's what you want, Gaby," said Sam, quietly, his eyes tender, "I'll see Johnson & Graysville this afternoon. Want to come along, Gaby?"

Gabrielle bit her lip. Darn! She thought miserably, she was becoming the world's best cry baby! She almost never cried before, but now
she seemed to pucker up and squeeze
back tears every time she talked to anyone.

"Whatever you think, Daddy,"
she said huskily.

"I'll talk to him first," replied
Sam, smiling wistfully. "There's no need for you seeing him until it's necessary."

"Thank you, Daddy," said Gabrielle very low.

"If you'd rather go to New York and see Peter before you decide—if you aren't sure—" Sam offered lamely.

"Of course she doesn't want to go
and see Peter!" exclaimed Helen.

"If he proposes to run away from his obligations, and doesn't want Gabrielle to come there, why certainly she doesn't need to beg him
to take her back!"

"I only want Gaby to be sure,
Helen," put in Sam mildly.

"Of course, we know you meant
it for the best, Sam," said Helen,
mollified. She turned to Gabrielle,
but found her staring with unseeing
eyes out the front windows.

"You wouldn't want to go to New York first, would you, Gabrielle?"
she asked.

Gabrielle turned around and smiled slightly.

"What did you say, Mother?" she asked, as though she hadn't heard a word they had said.

Helen sighed. "We wondered if you would like to go to Peter and have a talk with him before you see
for divorce," she explained gently.

"Oh no, Mother, I've quite made up my mind. Peter doesn't want me,
and so—I don't want him either."

She turned away to hide the quivering of her mouth. She did too want Peter, but she would soon get over it, after the divorce, when she was free.

"Well, if you're sure, Gaby, I'll see Johnson & Graysville right away. They'll know the way that will cause the least talk, also how to get it over with quickly."

"Poor Daddy, I am a burden to you, and it looks like I always will be," Gabrielle said, putting her arms
around his neck and laying her head
on his shoulder.

"There, there, honey, don't cry,"
Sam begged, patting the curly head.
"We only want you to be happy,
Gaby. That's about all we've ever wanted since you were born."

"I know it, and that's why I feel so awful," she said, between sobs.
"I'm just no good to anyone. I'm not a good daughter, nor a good wife
either."

"Well, you

BRISTOL THEATRE

Natural charm, refreshing simplicity, and a story that is warm and real are among the delightful qualities of "Little Miss Molly," which had its first local showing at the Bristol Theatre yesterday.

Maureen O'Hara, the young Irish girl whose movie success has been so rapid, is beautiful and convincing in the role of Eileen O'Shea, and it is easy to understand why the prominent air-commentator and film critic, Jimmie Fidler, picked Maureen as the "star discovery of the year."

The movies turn their batteries of indignation on corruption in the parole system in "Parole Fixer," which last night made its debut in the Bristol Theatre.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

FROM the south, from the far west, and from Florida, carloads of fresh vegetables daily find their way to the markets. Prices on these spring vegetables are all reasonable, and so succulent to appetites jaded by the selections of winter, that even an all-vegetable meal occasionally would probably be welcomed by the family. Beef prices, higher than they have been, continue their upward swing, as does the price on lamb. Veal, which can be prepared in a variety of ways, remains at its low price level. Poultry prices, with the exception of turkeys, are higher than they have been, but will probably be lower within the next few weeks. With the resuming of fishing activities by many boats tied up for some time with strikes in the east, prices on many fish have dropped. Egg prices remain at the low they have been for the past few weeks, and their quality and abundance make them an attractive addition to the market basket.

Here are three menus suggested by Clara Anthony of the A&P Kitchen for Sunday Dinner:

Low Cost Dinner

Fruit Cup
Fresh Pork Roast
Buttered New Potatoes
Baked Red Cabbage
Bread and Butter
Jellied Vegetable Salad
Fresh Apple Pie
Tea Coffee Milk

Moderate Cost Dinner

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Chuck Roast of Beef with Browned Potatoes
Buttered Broccoli
Avocado Salad
Bread and Butter
Strawberry Bavarian Cream
Tea Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Spiced Fruit Juice Cocktail
Roast Chicken with Onion Stuffing
Fresh Asparagus
with Hollandaise Sauce
New Potatoes with Parsley Butter
Rolls and Butter
Molded Cucumber Salad
Fluffy Lemon Pie

RITZ THEATRE

Hollywood stars receive requests for autographs every day but the one Edward Arnold sent to a boyhood pal, Freddie Breves, had an unusual effect. It made Breves a hero in the eyes of his daughter. Breves, who became a police officer and was wounded in the line of duty, lived next door to Arnold on Houston street, New York. They haven't seen one another since they were boys but Breves took the liberty of writing Arnold because his daughter was skeptical about his ever knowing the star.

Arnold, who plays a leading featured role in "The Earl of Chicago," starring Robert Montgomery, and

BRISTOL A. A. NINE TO PLAY IN BURLINGTON

The Bristol A. A. baseball team will open the season, Sunday, at Burlington, where they will cross bats with the strong Colored Spartans, champions of Burlington County last season. The game will be played on the high school field beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The game will mark the opening of the season in Burlington and the first ball will be thrown out by Mayor Johnson. There will be music by the Metropolitan band of Burlington.

Last season, the local club defeated the Spartans in a 14-inning game, at Burlington. Manager Mulholland, when asked last night in regard to the condition of his club, said: "The boys have had no practice on account of the weather but they will give a good account of themselves. I intend to take 15 men over with me and will get a good line on my players as to who will start. The A. A. club has three pitchers on the club in Dick, Cahill and Linck. Maybe the three will work three innings each. Felkner may catch if VanZant's hand is not ready. The rest of the club will be: Palowez, Stallone, Harrison, Hughes, Hunter, McGinley, Kelly, Brighter, Palumbo."

Masterson Wins 1st Game; Washington Downs Boston

Walter Masterson, formerly of Landreth Seeds baseball club, pitched Washington to its first win of the season, yesterday, beating Boston, 9-6.

Walter went in the box in the sixth inning, with the score: Boston 6—Washington 4. In the last four innings he allowed the Sox but one hit, no runs, one base on balls, struck out five batters, and made one run himself.

BASEBALL PRACTICE

The president, Mrs. Strouse, addressed the gathering, and spoke at length on activities of interest to the society, namely, tuberculosis work and child welfare.

Entertainment for the occasion included a vocal solo by Mrs. Tracy, specialty act, Mrs. Abart; piano solos, Mrs. Strouse; reading, Mrs. Dettmer; group singing.

The table centerpiece was composed of red and white carnations, in keeping with the color plan for the affair. The flowers were later presented to one member who is ill, Mrs. Warren Randall, Langhorne. Favors were "Scarlett O'Hara" sachets.

A delicious turkey dinner was served. The May meeting will be held in Bristol, and the June 14th session at Langhorne will be a joint affair for Bucks-Montgomery 40 n' 8 Vulture, and the 8 n' 40 Salon.

Marian Conrad Beans, of Newtown, has thousands of old buttons in a very unique collection, a Chippendale low chest that's fine, and a very nice Wistarburg (South Jersey) glass vase.

In the display of the pioneer shop of Mary B. Atkinson, Doylestown, are found numerous high-class exhibits of furniture and other antiques, outstanding among them being a well-known Hicks painting of "Peaceable Kingdom."

The Red Chair Antiques, Sellersville, another of the better known shops, has a very large and varied display of furniture, glassware, an elegant decorated Dutch chest, very attractive painted trays and numerous other items.

The Frank M. Weaver display of furniture, from his Lansdale studios, is featuring an early Dutch Kas dated 1737, probably the oldest furniture piece in the show. This exhibit alone is worth a trip to the 1940 show.

Lillian T. Carver, of Ivyland, is showing the usual fine pieces for which that shop is famous, including a Queen Anne round table, a very rare design, in addition to a scroll top linen closet, all original, and an early hat rack, hand carved, dating back to the 1600's.

Flower prints and old furniture are displayed in the booth of Laura Witmer, Philadelphia, a new-comer to the show this year.

You can spend a lot of time and be interested in the exhibit of Henry D. Pennypacker, of Telford, formerly of Reading, a dealer with 330 years' experience. Here you will find the only eight-day grandfather's clock in the show, with an applewood case. The largest display of glassware in the show will be found in the Pennypacker exhibit. In addition you will find a very desirable, small-sized Chippendale chest of drawers.

Mrs. William H. Thayer, of Pipersville, has many interesting things, including two handsome Duncan Phyfe chairs. One of the centers of interest in the Thayer exhibit is the four-room doll house, completely furnished with small antique furniture.

The Olivia Waters Regar shops, Collegeville, and Cape May, N. J., includes old furniture, china and various primitives, and probably the finest collection of paper-weights in the show.

Another new-comer is Mabel C. Osborne, Montclair, N. J., with a display of old silver and jewelry of the usable type. She has a very unique pewter pen box that belonged to Commodore Oliver Perry, and many other small week on such days as the collector may designate." It has been found that in some instances residents are not doing this and consequently their ashes are not being collected by the authorized collector.

The waging of a campaign to clean-up Bristol is advocated by many and that the campaign should not only be restricted to those places in public view but to out-of-the-way places where perhaps the public does not get a glimpse is also being advocated.

It has been brought to the attention of the authorities that in some instances where the collector did not remove the ashes due to it not being properly placed and in an accessible location, that some have expressed an intention to "dump the stuff in the street or wherever they saw fit."

Section 7 of the ordinance provides: "That any person or persons, firm or corporation, who shall fail to comply with any of the provisions of this ordinance, or who shall violate or cause to be violated any of the provisions of this ordinance, shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of $25 for each and every offense.

Meats Abound In Vitamins, Tests Show

"Do we eat to live or live to eat?" Of course we really eat to live, but, according to the latest discoveries in the science of nutrition, we find that many of the foods which taste best are best for us. And among these are meats.

Recent research has shown that meats are a good source of vitamins. In fact, it has just been found that pork ranks as the richest of our common foods in thiamin, one of the parts of the vitamin B complex. Thiamin is sometimes referred to as the "spark-plug" vitamin because it performs many important functions in the body, among which are stimulating the appetite, promoting growth, and aiding in the utilization of carbohydrates by the body. All meats, and especially the glandular meats, such as liver, heart and kidney, are rich in essential vitamins, not only in thiamin, but also in riboflavin and nicotinic acid, other important parts of the vitamin B complex, says Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Not to be overlooked is the fact that meats are excellent sources of high quality protein. In the early days of nutrition, all protein-rich foods were considered equally valuable in the diet, but, as the science of nutrition unfolded, it was established that some proteins are of greater value to the body because they contain a greater percentage of the essential amino acids. Among the most valuable sources of proteins is meat, not only because it provides a large amount of high quality protein, but the kind that the body can use to the best advantage for building and repairing body tissue.

The role of minerals in nutrition is important, also, for even though the actual amount of these minerals is small, they must be present. Lean meats, and especially the glandular meats, are good sources of iron, copper and phosphorus, three of the minerals so often lacking in the diet. These minerals are needed for many functions in the body. Iron and copper are necessary for building rich red blood; phosphorus is needed, together with calcium, for the building of strong bones and teeth.

Make Breakfast A Tempting Meal

If you "can't get 'em up in the morning," meaning your family of sleepy-heads, doesn't start the day off wrong for the whole household? It means that everyone has to hurry and there's no time for a friendly chat, a little planning of the day's activities or even for a breakfast that is satisfying and thoroughly enjoyed. And perhaps that last is the most harmful feature. This is especially true where there are children who have a long morning at school, or when any members of the household have strenuous days before them. They need a substantial breakfast after the night's fast as a supply of energy for their work or play.

Breakfast Is Important
Sometimes a really tempting breakfast will solve the problem in two ways. It will be worth getting up for and a satisfying amount of food will be eaten. In fact, breakfast is a meal worth a little extra planning, says Inez S. Willson, home economist, and she suggests that this planning include ease of preparation. A really good breakfast need not take much time or extra work.

For instance, the addition of crisp bacon slices to the breakfast menu is a great tempter of appetites, and bacon requires only a short time to prepare. Put a single layer of slices in a cool frying-pan and cook slowly over low heat, turning occasionally. Pour off the fat from time to time so that the bottom of the pan is only well greased. When the bacon is light golden brown and evenly crisped, remove to a hot platter.

Canadian style bacon or ham slices may be used if you prefer. They are as easily broiled or pan-broiled.

Another taste tempter which is also a fine source of energy for the day is sausage. Little link sausage is easily prepared. Here is a way of serving it in combination with fruit, an especially tasty breakfast dish.

Sausage Links with Pineapple
Link sausage
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups crushed pineapple and juice
Toast

Place the sausage in a cool frying-pan. Add 2 tablespoons water, cover and steam for five minutes. Remove cover, pour off liquid and brown. Take up sausage. Add flour to dripping and brown. Add crushed pineapple, stirring until it is heated. Serve on toast points with link sausage on top.

TO DISCUSS TAXES

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee and member of the Joint Committee on Government Organizations, will address the Joint National Real Estate Tax Conference when it meets in Washington, D. C., April 25th and 26th on the pyramiding of taxes as a major deterrent to economic recovery. Economic peril and disadvantageous social results involved in an excessive tax burden on farms will be discussed by Louis J. Taber, Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, and by Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association and vice-president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Governor Clarence D. Martin of Washington, who will picture the results of a general readjustment of the tax structure in that state over the past eight years in relation to general economic welfare of the state, to governmental financing, and to stabilization of property ownership, will be principal speaker at the dinner meeting to be held on the closing day of the conference. Official reports of results effected in nine states by far-reaching tax changes over the past ten years will be analyzed by Lawrence G. Holmes, Chicago. Unequal tax incidence as a deterrent to home ownership will be brought before the conference through a spot study of variations in the levies on individual properties of the same appraised value found by a mortgage agency in various taxing jurisdictions.

Courier Classified Ads bring results and costs very little.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

FOR CLEVER HOSTESSING

Here is an idea for a clever hostess with an eye to time and taste. Serve the ever-popular frankfurter done up in a flavorsome and flatteringly barbecue sauce. This tantalizing dish is a highly successful late snack or luncheon specialty, and you'll want to serve it for dinner sometime soon, with baked potatoes and cole slaw. Hungry men and boys will eat these frankfurters by the plateful.

Barbecued Frankfurters

Heat in skillet—
2 frankfurters butter.
Cook in butter until browned—
¼ cup finely chopped onion.

Add—
2 tablespoons pure cider vinegar
2 tablespoons brown sugar
¼ cup tomato ketchup
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon prepared brown mustard
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup water
¼ cup chopped celery.
Cook over moderate flame for 15 minutes or until thickened.

Prick—

1 lb. (about eight) frankfurters.
Place in the sauce, then cover and continue to cook slowly for 15 minutes or until frankfurters are tender. Serve hot with sauce.

IT'S A PLEASURE

It's one of the real pleasures of life to eat a generous serving of Washington pie centered with a high-standing layer of fluffy, creamy Fruit Custard Filling. This is a new variation on that popular dessert theme, cake—one that you'll want to serve often. Canned mince meat containing an expertly seasoned combination of fruits and choice beef is touched up with a whip of lemon juice to provide the fine flavor, while whipped cream added into smooth custard furnishes the delicate background which shows it off so well.

Fruit Custard Filling for Washington Pie

Scald in double boiler—
¾ cup milk.
Combine and beat well—
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 egg
¼ teaspoon salt.

Pour scalded milk slowly into this mixture, then return to double boiler and cook, stirring constantly, until well thickened.

Add—
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup canned mince meat.
Cover and cook ten minutes.
Remove from heat and cool.

Whip until stiff—

1 cup whipping cream.
Fold cream into custard mixture. Chill, then spread generously between layers of a fresh plain butter cake. This makes a filling about three-fourths inch high for a nine-inch square cake.

MAGICAL MEAL-IN-ONE

A small amount of left-over beef roast magically becomes a feast-in-one-dish when you bread it, brown it, then serve it with zesty cooked spaghetti in tomato sauce. This fine blend of flavors with tender meat tastes so very good and is so easy to make it inspires you to save money often by buying roasts large enough to make two or three meals.

Cut in thin slices
Left-over beef roast.

Combine—
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup heavy cream or evaporated milk.

Dip meat into liquid, then into fine dry bread crumbs. Brown on both sides in fat. Remove from skillet, then heat in same pan—

1. large (24-oz.) can cooked spaghetti in tomato sauce.

Heap spaghetti on hot serving platter, surround with the breaded meat and garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Delicious As Its Name

By Frances Lee Barton

WHAT'S in a name? Take "Chocolate Mint Cream," for example. Doesn't each word whet your appetite? Blend these and the other ingredients listed below, into a mold of this dessert and you really have something worth while.

Chocolate Mint Cream
2 squares unsweetened chocolate; 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin; ¼ cup milk; 1½ cups milk, scalded; ½ cup sugar; ½ teaspoon salt; 1 cup heavy cream; ¼ teaspoon vanilla; few drops oil of peppermint; green coloring.
Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Soak gelatin in ¼ cup milk 5 minutes. Add scalded milk, sugar, and salt, and stir until gelatin is dissolved; add cream. Pour 2 cups gelatin mixture slowly into melted chocolate, beating with rotary egg beater until blended; then cook 5 minutes. Remove from boiling water and add vanilla. Chill chocolate mixture until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until thickened. Pour ½ of chocolate mixture into large mold or individual molds and chill until firm. Place remaining chocolate mixture over lukewarm water until ready to mold. To the plain gelatin mixture, add oil of peppermint and green coloring. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until thickened. Turn into mold over firm chocolate layer and chill until firm. Pour remaining chocolate mixture into mold. Chill until firm. Serve plain or with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Interiors Like This Are Economical

THIS attractive interior was not "planned" by the owner before he built his home. One room was simply transformed into a library when he felt the need of a place in which to store his books.

You can do the same thing in your home at a very small expenditure. It is not necessary to build an additional or a special room. Bookshelves can be easily installed along the wall or whatever room you prefer and, with a little paneling, and a dado below the windowsill level, you will have a library of which you can be proud.

FOOD MARKET

Advice-

CARLOADS of the garden products of Texas, California and the Carolinas continue to pour into the markets, certain sign that spring is here despite uncertain temperatures. Due to the system of mass merchandising developed by the chain stores even the vegetables and fruits formerly in the luxury class are now available at modest prices so that the housekeeper with a limited budget can still fill her menus with plenty of spring vegetables and fruit.

Prices on the majority of fresh vegetables are reasonable, although some few, such as broccoli and beans, showed slight advances this week. Lettuce, too, is slightly higher and scarcer than a week ago, but not out of the average budget's reach for salads. Tomatoes also show a slight increase in price this week.

Beef Prices Up

Beef prices continue their advance upward, showing an increase over even a week ago. Lamb prices, too, have increased slightly, since this is in-between seasons for lamb. The first of a new crop is just coming in, and the last of the old crop is quite scarce. Legs of lamb are still a good buy.

Poultry is higher this week, and scarcer than it has been for a long time. Heavy turkeys are the best poultry buy, their prices being about the same as chickens.

Flounders are more plentiful in the fish market, but the prices remain about the same. A large catch of herring has arrived on the markets, and the price on this herring is very low. Shad is now reasonably priced, although none has yet moved up the Hudson River. Striped bass is plentiful and low. Scallop, scarce for some weeks, are now cheaper because the boats on strike have resumed their regular schedules, and will bring this favorite fish food to markets. Clams are still plentiful and cheap, and make a satisfactory one-dish luncheon when combined with fresh vegetables in a chowder.

Eggs Remain Unchanged

This is the season when egg production and egg quality is at its peak. Their prices make them available for daily menus in a variety of ways.

The first of the field rhubarb is coming into the market. Low in cost, and with that tang that adds zest to any meal, the rhubarb is a valuable addition to a meal. Strawberries are plentiful, and cheaper than they have been for several weeks.

Here is a menu made up of reasonable foods at reasonable cost:

Roast Veal Cutlets with Rice
Luttered New Beets
Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Custard Bread Pudding
Coffee Tea Milk

BUCKS COUNTY'S RELIEF PROBLEMS

County Commissioner Joseph D. Baker, at a recent meeting when the relief work in the county was discussed, explained the County Commissioners' responsibilities in this connection. Commissioner Baker gave figures showing the rapid increase in expenses for the care of children of dependents.

His discussion of the situation was briefly, as follows:

By Co. Commissioner Joseph D. Baker

In a search of the records in the County Home we find the Bucks County Children's Aid Society was organized February 14, 1884, as an auxiliary to the Philadelphia Children's Aid Society.

Members paid annual dues of $1. Children were received from their parents and the Court.

In June, 1884, the Society began to function independently and the Directors of the Poor gave the Society full charge of all children taken in the County Home.

From 1884 to 1936, this volunteer body of women known as the Bucks County Children's Aid Society was placing and supervising agent for children in charge of the county and foster homes. All bills were paid by the Directors of the Poor upon monthly requisition presented by the Aid Society.

From 1924 to 1931 a part time visitor was employed to supervise children, in co-operation with the Aid Society.

From 1931 to 1937 regular visits were made, and detailed records were kept of all social, mental and physical history of each child by a full time investigator employed by the Directors of the Poor. In 1933 the Court appointed a juvenile probation officer to take charge of all Juvenile Court cases.

After the passage of the Goodrich Bill No. 936, June 24, 1937, creating the County Institution District (officers of which are the County Commissioners) and terminating the offices of the Directors of the Poor on December 31, 1937. The first official move the Institution District made was to place the Juvenile Probation Officer in full charge of the juvenile end of the institution, with the assistance of the newly incorporated Aid Society, this society having legal authority to act at all times under the direction of the Juvenile Probation Officer, subject, however, to such control and direction as the Judges of the Juvenile Court may see proper to exercise.

This additional care of the Institution District given to the Juvenile Probation officers, already overloaded, was taken care of by the Court's instruction to the adult probation officer, to render all assistance possible until an Assistant Juvenile Probation Officer could be secured.

On March 9, 1937, the Court instructed the Institution District to place on the pay roll Miss Alice Cunningham as an assistant to Miss Gertrude Bright; also another stenographer and bookkeeper. This was carried out.

This operation or function has been satisfactory to the Court and Institution District and, we hope, to the county as a whole.

However, the Institution District was desirous of having the Department of Welfare's approval, and asked for an investigator. In the course of a few weeks Mr. Jorda from the Department investigated and approved the methods being carried out, and recommended foster homes rather than a County Detention Home.

An important feature is the financing.

Mrs. Hoffman has given you a few statistics. Let us look at a few more; the maintenance of child wards in the county for the year:

In 1936, children in institutions, $6,088.88; in private homes, $18,066.59; total, $24,155.47.

In 1937, children in institutions, $6,110.78; in private homes, $26,848.71; total, $32,959.49.

You will notice the expenditures for the child wards have increased over 100 per cent in the last four years, in harmony with the increase in the number of juveniles.

A large per cent of the cases, new or old, can be traced back to an indigent or insane percentage. And this population is on the increase at an alarming rate.

Shall we stand idly by, look sorrowful, build more institutions, increase the tax rate and then pity ourselves for the unbearable burden? Statistics show that one-third of the population are dependents, and at the present pace it will not be many years until it will be 50 per cent.

The time has arrived when we should consider this matter seriously and courageously.

The unfortunates must be cared for, but more important is to not have so large a percentage of them.

We have in the county over 60 social service, relief and charitable organizations. What wonderful results could be accomplished if those organizations would unite in a move in this direction.

How many of us would rather pay the doctor for his advice than his medicine.

The Great Game of Politics

situation, that he did not know Mr. Cromwell intended to stay in Canada only a few months, wanted the post merely because it helped his Senatorial aspirations.

THAT under these circumstances, and in a period so critical, such a man as this could be chosen for one of the most important posts in the diplomatic service is an almost incredible thing. If this is competence in the handling of foreign affairs, then the word has lost its meaning. If this is keeping our relations with our neighbors on a high plane, then it would be difficult to recognize a low one. If this is safe leadership in a world crisis, then the national need for change is very great, indeed.

IN the three months he has served Mr. Cromwell has distinguished himself twice—first, by making a speech of such character as to cause embarrassment in Washington and bring a stern rebuke from Secretary Hull; second, by suddenly appearing in Detroit at the highly publicized wedding of a 45-year-old radio comedian to a 16-year-old child. Now that he is returning to New Jersey it is clear that the support of Mr. Hague will insure him the Senatorial nomination. As in the case of his appointment to Canada, the only conceivable reason for nominating Mr. Cromwell for the Senate is his possession of great wealth and his willingness to part with some of it.

A FRIEND of Mr. Hague, returning from Miami, reports that, speaking one day down there with the Jersey boss about the Cromwell candidacy, the latter complacently said, "It's the politician's dream, ain't it?" Certainly, it seems so. Never has there been quite so fat a cat, nor one so purringly willing, as now appears in the Jersey primaries. One interesting though incidental reaction is the slight embarrassment caused the New Deal political propagandists.

FOR eight years they have harped steadily upon the wealthy enemies of the New Deal. Lambasting the Liberty League, the du Ponts, the Weirs, the Pews, and others, the idea they sought to convey was that all the rich — particularly the idle rich — were against Mr. Roosevelt, the noble champion of the downtrodden and poor. Of course, it wasn't a sound idea, but it was effective campaign buncombe. Now, Mr. Cromwell, richer and more idle than any of the targets on the other side, looms up as a conspicuous Roosevelt favorite, heavy campaign contributor, ardent New Dealer and Senatorial candidate. He cramps their style. They can't make it stick any more.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — The one time a designer feels like a real hero in his own country is when a picture star wants to copy her screen clothes for her own wardrobe.

Jane Wyman, who recently finished one of the feminine roles in "Brother Rat and a Baby," loved the plum wool dinner gown she wears in a scene with Ronald Regan showing ornate embroidery around the high neck and fragrant sleeves with bits of beaded fringe dripping at intervals to give the dress a far Eastern look. Jane has copied this identically in moss green.

Milo Anderson, who did the clothes for this amusing sequel to "Brother Rat," advised Jane to wear as many turbans as possible while they're in style since it's one hat silhouette that does just about everything a hat can do for a girl of her type.

The Gibson girl blouse, featured in "The Life of Victor Herbert," and designed by Edith Head, has been unanimously approved by its lovely star, Mary Martin, in crisp dimities with lace and bright plaid cotton volles and organdies. We don't somehow think of a skirt and blouse as appropriate for a tea, but Mary gave her outfit such a smart twist it could go anywhere and probably will. She wore a half-length gray wool skirt with slightly flared hemline made extra parky with an inner banding of stiff grosgrain ribbon.

Her blouse with wide puffed shoulders and pleated bosom front was in gray and black plaid organdie. A surprise touch was her deep blue suede belt with sterling buckle. Hat, shoes, gloves and bag were in black, the hat a floppy brimmed profile turned up on one side like a pirate's hat.

A jacket should always terminate where it is most flattering to the figure. That's why Merle Oberon, who is neither a short girl nor yet a very tall one, just the happy medium—that all girls crave to be, is at her fashion best in jackets that don't quite reach the knees. For a scene on shipboard in "We Shall Meet Again" we did one in a soft petal pink camels hair with detachable sequin hood.

With the hood this type of coat makes the perfect formal evening topper, without it suits any sports outfit and shows up well on the most hectic spring shopping spree. Merle thought it should too and is having one made in white with a grosgrain ribbon hood since she believes sequins too ornate for warm weather wear.

OWLS' TRACKMEN WIN OUT IN MEET OVER 3 SCHOOLS

Bensalem Trounces Both Morrisville and Fallsington Track Teams

MORRISVILLE IS SECOND

Fallsington Ends Third With A Total Score of Seven Points

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 25—Bensalem trackmen, trounced by the Jenkins Drakes in a dual meet last week at Jenkintown, came back with full force to beat two opponents on the new Morrisville track here yesterday afternoon. The Owls rolled up 36 points with the Morrisville Bulldogs, one of the victims, a close second with 29 tallies; while the Fallsington Falcons, the other rival, finished a poor third with only 7 points.

The Owls showed superior strength to both Morrisville and Fallsington in the running events by clocking up 24 of their points in the five races as compared to 13 for Morrisville and 3 for Fallsington. They also outscored their rivals in the field events too with a 12 point total in a trio of events. Morrisville again furnished most of the opposition and finished a close second with 11 markers as compared to 4 for the third place Falcons.

Both the Owls and Bulldogs came up with a quartet of first places while the ultimate winners grabbed five seconds and one third as compared to one second and six thirds for the Bulldogs. Tom Doyle's second in the high jump, George Lovett's third in the same event plus the Falcon's second in the relay, gave the Falls boys their seven points.

No one scored a "double" in the meet although Bob Scarborough, Charlie Lehr, and George Carter for the Owls and Genden and Earl Wood of Morrisville each placed in two events.

All three dash events ended in photo finishes with the 440 topping the list for excitement with Earl Wood and LeRoy Swan providing the thrills. Neck and neck all the way to the finish line times, it was ultimately Wood who lunged at the tape to beat Swan by a hairline. The pressure of the race forced both runners with the result that each snapped the Bucks County record in that event with Wood breaking the tape in 25 seconds flat. The County mark is held by Art Baehr of the Bulldogs who set it last year at Quakertown in 55.5 seconds. However, Wood's mark will not go into the official county records.

In the mile relay, the Fallsington Falcons stepped out to an early lead and held it at the close of the first lap, but Charlie Madie, runner second for the Owls, returned the baton to Settle with a slight advantage favoring the Blue and Grey runners. This was lost, however, by Settle in a slow get-away, but was regained in the final lap by George Carter who piled up a huge margin halfway around but slipped near the end. In spite of that though his lead was sufficient to enable him to come in ahead of the Falcon anchor man and thereby clinch first place for the Owls in 3 min. 45 seconds. The Bulldogs trailed in third position all the way around.

Charlie Lehr barely nosed out Bob Scarborough, his team mate, in the century dash while Len Edjys did likewise to another teammate, George Carter, in the 220 dash, both in very close finishes. Widman easily won the half mile run as did Hagenbacker in the shot event. However, both Bob Scarborough and Genden were forced to win their respective events, the high jump and broad jump.

OWLETT'S LATE RALLY NIPS RICHBORO, 12 TO 11

RICHBORO, Apr. 25—Trailing by four runs, 11-7, going into the final frame, the Bensalem Owlets diamond aggregation came up with a spectacular five run rally then withstood a budding Richboro uprising in the last half of the inning to nip the 1939 softball kings of the Lower Bucks County League here yesterday afternoon in a slugfest, 12-11.

The Owl girls, who trailed by five run margins twice during the game and were behind throughout the entire contest until the finish, just wouldn't give up. And in their aggressive manner they pushed across the runs that ultimately gave them the triumph in that final hectic session.

They failed to score in only two events, the 120 low hurdles and discus, in both of which they had no entries due to not having equipment for either event. ## AT THE CAPITOL

(By International News Service)

HARRISBURG — Governor James today finds himself in the same predicament faced by his predecessors as he prepares to issue a call for a May special session of the Legislature. The date for convening the Legislature presents no obstacle, but the number of subjects to be included in the call does. The Governor was earlier known to have decided on including only two subjects in his call . . . the appropriation of additional relief funds and extension of the Pittsburgh-Harrisburg superhighway to Philadelphia . . . but pressure has been brought to include other subjects.

The foremost one is revision of the unemployment compensation laws . . . The Governor agrees with a legislative committee that revision of the jobless benefit laws to exempt employers from paying taxes on salaries above $3,000 a year would be a good thing and would not promote controversy, the one thing the Governor wishes to avoid in the special session. The rub, however, is that although under the law the Legislature can consider only those subjects enumerated in the call, there is nothing to stop the legislators from taking what action they choose on the subjects which are enumerated.

Other subjects which the Governor is being asked to include in his call are amendments to the milk and liquor laws.

The imposing array of attorneys from all parts of the State that are present at State Pardon Board sessions included a modern Portia last week . . . When the Board called the case of a Luzerne county slayer, up stepped an attractive young lady who identified herself as counsel for the applicant . . . She was Miss Josephine B. Lippi Mullen from Philadelphia and it was her first appearance before the Board . . . She ran headlong into a rebuke when she attempted to read a two-page statement begging clemency after insisting she had a half-hour to enter her appeal . . . Chairman Samuel S. Lewis, the Lieutenant-governor, told her that the Board would be in session all night if every one was permitted a half-hour.

More than 300 representatives to the annual intercollegiate conference on government held at the State capital adopted a series of resolutions including the placing of an embargo on goods destined for Japan and extending continued financial aid to China. At the same time they recommended a treaty with Japan "and other interested powers" to neutralize the Philippines.
